Dear Colorado Northwestern Community College Graduates,

I offer my heartfelt congratulations to each member of the Class of 2026. You have earned this moment through persistence, sacrifice, and determination. I also extend my sincere gratitude to the faculty and staff whose guidance, care, and commitment helped make your success possible.

Each year, I look forward to commencement because of the energy in the room—the pride, the joy, and the unmistakable sense that something meaningful has been achieved. Today, it feels as though anything is possible.

But I want to ask you a different question than the one often asked on days like this:

What could you accomplish if you were never afraid?

Not fearless in the sense of never feeling uncertainty—but fearless in the sense of never letting that uncertainty stop you.

Because the truth is, after today, life will not always feel as clear or celebratory. There may be moments of doubt—times when plans don't unfold as expected, when opportunities seem out of reach, or when change arrives uninvited. It's in those moments that many people hesitate. They wait. They second-guess. They stop moving.

And that is exactly when it matters most that you don't.

As Sheryl Sandberg once said, “Done is better than perfect.” Progress does not come from waiting until everything is certain or flawless—it comes from taking the next step, even when you're unsure. Especially when you're unsure.

Spencer Johnson, in Who Moved My Cheese?, reminds us, “What would you do if you weren't afraid?” It's a simple question, but a powerful one. Because fear often disguises itself as practicality or caution. It tells you to stay where it's comfortable, even when you know there's more ahead.

But growth doesn't happen in comfort. It happens in motion.

Another line from that same book offers a truth worth remembering: “When you move beyond your fear, you feel free.” That freedom—the willingness to adapt, to try again, to step into the unknown—is what will set you apart.

You will face challenges. Everyone does. But those challenges are not signals to stop; they are invitations to adjust, to learn, and to keep going.

I once knew a graduate who applied for a position at a company he deeply admired—and was turned down. He could have accepted that as the end of the story. Instead, he chose to keep moving. He pursued further education, found a different way into that same organization, and ultimately secured a role that was not only better aligned with his goals but exceeded his original expectations.

His success didn't come from avoiding failure. It came from refusing to be paralyzed by it.

That is the mindset I hope you carry forward.

So when things get complicated—and they will—don't stand still. When things change—and they will—don't retreat. Move. Adapt. Try again. Trust that forward motion, even imperfect motion, is always better than none at all.

And today—before all of that begins—take time to celebrate. Celebrate the work you've done, the obstacles you've overcome, and the people who helped you along the way. Shake a hand, hug your family, thank your instructors, and take in this moment fully.

Because you've earned it.

Graduates, the future is not something you wait for—it is something you shape. So go forward with courage. Go forward with action. And whenever you find yourself hesitating, return to that question:

What would you do if you weren't afraid?

Then go do it.

Congratulations, Class of 2026.

Sincerely,

Lisa Jones, Ph.D.

President, Colorado Northwestern Community College

Graduation Honors recognizes outstanding academic achievement throughout a student's academic career at the home institution. The honors are awarded to students who complete the requirements for an Associate Degree or certificate and have completed at least 60 credits, 15 of which must be completed at CNCC and earn a 3.5 or better cumulative grade point average at the institution.

Only college-level courses completed at the institution will be included in the GPA calculation. Honors are indicated by superscript letters following a student's name in the list of graduates.
